RBN International's Code of Conduct

☑ What is a code of conduct?

A code of business conduct is a set of rules that guide people in daily practices and interactions with each other. In the workplace, a code of conduct may also be referred to as a code of business ethics. Some organizations expect their employees to adhere to a code of conduct with many requirements and rules, whereas others are extremely simple. Codes of conduct are most often included in the employee handbook and may also be posted on the company's website for investors, potential employees and stakeholders to view.

☑ Benefits of a code of conduct include:

Providing a guideline for behavior and expectations within the workplace: When discussing job performance, this is one of the first indicators of what is expected. Having this explicitly stated within the organization handbook provides a central reference point.

Ensuring all employees are made aware of what is and isn't tolerated at work: Dealing with difficult employees is one of the key sources of workplace conflict. Building awareness around expected behaviors opens up avenues for dialogue and engagement.

Outlining a company's values and principles: This is a way of showing the uniqueness of the organization and shaping the company's structure. It also plays a significant role in improving employee recruitment and retention.

Setting clear benchmarks as to how employee behavior and performance are measured: Having clear benchmarks ensures a level field for all employees and gives them the tools to recognize when actions don't align with the organization's goals or values.

Informing stakeholders, investors and potential employees of the company's ethics and standards: Ethics and standards are important to the workplace because they have a direct connection to employee trust, performance and satisfaction.

Along with these, there are other reasons why a code of business conduct is vital. It serves as a means for maintaining compliance, especially in industries where there are specific codes and procedures that must be followed. It also helps organizations protect themselves from damaging risks. When the company has specific steps to follow, they can demonstrate good faith effort in minimizing or even avoiding unethical or illegal acts.

Conflicts of Interest

What Is a Conflict of Interest?

A conflict of interest occurs when an entity or individual becomes unreliable because of a clash between personal (or self-serving) interests and professional duties or responsibilities. Such a conflict occurs when a company or person has a vested interest—such as money, status, knowledge, relationships, or reputation—which puts into question whether their actions, judgment, and/or decision-making can be unbiased. When such a situation arises, the party is usually asked to remove themselves, and it is often legally required of them.

1. The Effects of Conflict in the Workplace
2. Categories of Conflict of Interest

Conflict of interest in business is an all too common experience in the corporate world, and an issue that owners and managers must be prepared to deal with and act in the best interest of the company.

The broadest definition of a conflict of interest in the business world is when an employee puts their own interests before those of the organization, and by doing so jeopardizes the operation, profits or even trade secrets of the organization. It creates potential problems of trust between the individual and the business, especially if the individual exposes the business to potential legal action or creates a toxic atmosphere in the workplace that can severely cripple employee morale. Examples include:

- An employee has loyalties that are at odds with the operation or mission of the business, such as working for a competitor on a part-time or freelance basis.
- A person cannot be trusted to make unbiased business decisions due to personal relationships, such as a manager who was dating a co-worker and must weigh his or her advancement against the performance of an equally qualified employee.
- An employee opts for personal gain over the performance of the business, such as when an employee receives gifts in exchange for selecting one bidder over another.

The most common solution when a conflict of interest is detected is to have that employee removed from any instance where the conflict could affect decision-making or, in some cases, fire the employee. In severe cases, it might be wise for management to consult an attorney experienced in business law to make sure that employee rights are not violated and the company opens itself up to legal action.

The Effects of Conflict in the Workplace

It is generally in the interest of employees to avoid a conflict of interest because of the damage it can do to the employee's reputation, harm relations with coworkers, and the potential of loss of employment.

Employers should create employee handbooks that clearly spell out a code of conduct and provide the penalties for acting in any conflicting manner. A revealed conflict of interest can erode the trust the company may have in an employee's ability to carry out the duties of their role with the company. It could also cast suspicions on an employee's relationships with clients or other outside parties. There might also be a reluctance to share vital information with the employee.

However, conflicts of interest can be as varied as the occasions where they can occur and may not necessarily involve a criminal act.

Categories of Conflict of Interest

There are several categories the exist under the broader definition of conflict of interest:

- Family conflict of interest: This is common when family members receive special treatment based solely on their relationship to others in a business. A common term for this practice is nepotism. An example might be the son of the owner receiving special treatment when it comes to being hired over a more qualified candidate, advancement in the company over a more deserving employee or raise in pay not based in any way on performance.
- Romantic conflict of interest: This is actually a conflict that can be manifested in two ways. A person of authority can reward a romantic interest by providing special treatment or, in the case of a romance gone bad, punish the former romantic interest by creating a toxic work environment or passing the person over when opportunities for career advancement arise.
- Financial conflict of interest: A financial conflict arises when an employee (or even a director) benefits from payments of money, receives gifts with the implied intent of influencing an employee's decision or action or even providing a service at a favorable discount based on the employee's influence in the company.
- Confidential conflict of interest: Trade secrets are usually a valuable commodity that gives a business an edge over competition. By sharing this confidential information with another company, an employee can cause irreparable harm to an organization and strike a severe blow at the very heart of the company's existence.

Every business, no matter the industry it operates in, the goods they produce or the services they provide is susceptible to a conflict of interest creating problems. Unfortunately, it is a side of human nature that can occur with even the most trusted and reliable employee. The best a business can do is to establish an environment where conflicts of interest will not be tolerated.

Asset Protection

Asset Protection for Business Owners

When starting out a new business, one of the most important things to consider is how to protect RBN's personal assets from corporate liability. Without the proper protections, RBN's own assets, such as a house or a retirement fund, may be subject to the claims of RBN's business creditors or any legal judgments against RBN's business. In order to reduce the risk of this happening, there are several asset protection strategies that every business owner should consider.

Structuring RBN's Business to Protect RBN's Assets

The most fundamental step RBN can take toward asset protection is to structure RBN's business as a limited liability company so that RBN's assets are protected from business creditors. This could take the form of a limited liability corporation (LLC) or a limited liability partnership (LLP), among other options. By doing so, RBN formalize RBN's business as a separate legal entity that is distinct from RBN , as the owner, and this prevents RBN from being personally liable for the company's debts or legal liabilities.

While registering as an LLC or LLP can be an important first move toward protecting RBN's assets, it is not foolproof. There are numerous state and federal exceptions to limited liability that can allow owners to be held personally responsible for debts or payments made by their businesses. For instance, if RBN engage in conduct on behalf of the corporation that is harmful to others, RBN may be held personally liable for the consequences of such actions. When RBN sign financial documents for RBN's business in RBN's personal capacity, such as with a business loan, RBN's personal assets may become subject to creditors upon failure to repay such a loan. In order to minimize these risks, there are certain actions that RBN should take in addition to formation of RBN's LLC.

Protecting RBN's Personal Assets

After RBN have formed a limited liability business, there are certain rules that RBN should abide by in order to maximize the asset protection of RBN's business structure. First and foremost, it is important to keep personal and business assets separate and distinct. This is because courts have often found that business owners who create an independent legal structure for their business, but do not treat their business as independent of their personal finances, are not entitled to limited liability protection. This is known as the "alter ego" theory. If RBN treat RBN's business as an "alter ego" for RBN's self, rather than as a separate and distinct entity, RBN may lose the protective advantages of RBN's corporate status and become personally liable for RBN's business' debts.

In addition, business owners may also wish to increase their asset protection by purchasing insurance to cover against unexpected accidents, mistakes, or claims by third-party individuals. Liability and professional insurance can help insulate RBN's personal assets from protection in the event that RBN are subject to claims based on an exception to general limited liability.

Finally, in addition to structuring RBN's business in a way that maximizes asset protection, RBN may also wish to increase protection of RBN's personal assets by placing them in investment vehicles or trusts that provide protection from creditors or legal claims. For instance, RBN can place certain assets in managed trusts that are administered for the benefit of beneficiaries, but no longer controlled by RBN as the owner. In exchanging for relinquishing RBN's control over these assets, RBN can also ensure that the assets are protected from creditors and kept for the benefit of RBN's designated beneficiaries.

Company Culture

Benefits of Company Culture

Company culture is important to employees because workers are more likely to enjoy work when their needs and values are consistent with their employers. If you work somewhere where the culture is a good fit, you'll tend to develop better relationships with coworkers and be more productive.

On the other hand, if you work for a company where you don't fit in with the company culture, you are likely to take far less pleasure in your work. For example, if you prefer to work independently, but are employed by a company that emphasizes teamwork, you are likely to be less happy, not to mention less efficient.

Company culture is important to employers, too, because workers who fit in with the company culture are likely to not only be happier, but more productive as well. When an employee fits in with the culture, they are also likely to want to stay with that company for longer, which reduces turnaround and the associated costs of training new hires.

Attendance Expectations

Employee Attendance Policy :

1. Attendance policy overview.

Employees at RBN are expected to be present for work, on time, every day. Regular attendance and punctuality are important to keep your team and the company running smoothly. Arriving late, being tardy, or absence from work causes disruptions and burdens colleagues.

2. Calculation of attendance infractions.

- Absent with calls: 1 point.

- Absent, no call: 2 points.

- Tardy: ½ point.

- Early departure: ½ point.

- Late return from lunch or break: 1 point (over 30 minutes).

Employees are given a five-minute grace period at the start and end of each scheduled shift and for breaks and for lunch.

Employees are required to report an absence by [procedure for reporting an absence]. Employees must report each day they are absent. Failure to call-off one hour prior to a shift will result in a no call-no show.

Attendance infractions reset every [length time or dates on which employee attendance infractions reset. Typically 6 months or 1 year].

3. Overview of disciplinary action for attendance infractions.

Attendance issues will result in progressive disciplinary action up to and including termination based on the following point system:

- 3 points: Verbal warning.

- 4 points: Written warning.

- 5 points: Meeting with manager/supervisor, possible suspension.

- 6 points: Employee is subject to termination.

If an employee is absent for three or more consecutive days, evidence for excusing the absence, such as a doctor's note, must be provided.

If an employee is a no call-no show for three or more consecutive days, it will be considered a job abandonment or termination without notice.

Employees may request exceptions for work absences from human resources and management. These must be approved on a case-by-case basis.

4. Excused, unpaid absences without disciplinary action.

Excused, unpaid absences can be granted for funerals, jury duty, bereavement, child birth, a car accident, medical appointment, and unavoidable emergencies. In these cases employees must provide documentation to prove the reason for absence.

5. Failure to clock-In or clock-out.

Employees must clock-in and clock-out for each shift. If there is any problem recording a clock-in or clock-out, inform employees should inform a manager immediately. Employees who consistently fail to clock-in or clock-out may receive disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

6. Attendance policy exceptions.

Absence because of bereavement, jury duty, or military duty, are exempt from disciplinary action, anything require proper documentation to be given to a manager or Admin within 48 hours of the absence.

Sexual and general harassment and discrimination

INTRODUCTION

Sexual harassment in the workplace is a form of sex discrimination which negatively affects the working environment, undermines gender equality at work, creates unfair practices in employment, and adversely impacts the dignity and well-being of workers. It creates psychological anxiety and stress for victims and if ignored, can result in high costs for companies through loss of productivity, low worker morale, absenteeism, and staff turnover.

. OBJECTIVE

The Code provides practical guidance to employers, employers' organizations, workers and trade unions on the implementation of regulations to effectively prevent and address sexual harassment in the workplace in accordance with the Labour Code. It also recommends the development, implementation and monitoring of a workplace policy on sexual harassment to promote safe and healthy workplaces, where all workers, irrespective of sex or status, are treated with fairness, dignity and respect.

II. SCOPE AND COVERAGE

The Code applies to all companies, including enterprises and factories, in both the public and private sectors, regardless of size. Small companies may need to adapt some of the practical content identified in the Code to fit their operational structures, but adaptations should always be consistent with the general principles of the Code.

The term "workplace" in the Code refers not only to the specific location where work is being performed, such as an office or factory, but also to locations where work-related business may be conducted. These could include, but are not limited to:

- Work related social activities, such a reception organized by the enterprise for
- staff or clients, etc.;
- Conferences and training sessions;
- Official business travel;
- Business meals;
- Work related telephone conversations; and
- Work related communications through electronic media.

III. DEFINITIONS, IDENTIFICATION AND FORMS OF SEXUAL

HARASSMENT

1. WHAT IS SEXUAL HARASSMENT

"Sexual harassment" is defined as any behaviour of a sexual nature that affects the dignity of women and men, which is considered as unwanted, unacceptable, inappropriate and offensive to the recipient, and that creates an intimidating, hostile, unstable or offensive work environment. sexual harassment is committed when an employer, supervisor, manager or co-worker, undertakes or attempts to influence the process of recruitment, promotion, training, discipline, dismissal, salary increment or other benefit of an existing staff member or job applicant, in exchange for sexual favours.

The worst forms of sexual harassment are criminal acts such as sexual assault or rape, which are covered under the Penal Code.

2. WHAT IS NOT SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Occasional compliments that are socially and culturally acceptable and appropriate are not considered sexual harassment. Any interaction of a sexual nature which is consensual (except for those prohibited by the law such as sexual intercourse with children), welcome or reciprocated is not considered sexual harassment.

3. FORMS OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Sexual harassment in the workplace can be physical, verbal or non-verbal, and include the major forms as follows:

(a) Physical forms of sexual harassment such as any unwanted contact, ranging from intentionally touching, caressing, pinching, hugging or kissing to sexual assault or rape.

(b) Verbal forms of sexual harassment include socially and culturally inappropriate and unwelcome comments with sexual overtones such as sexually suggestive jokes or comments about a person's dress or body, made in their presence or directed toward them. They also include persistent proposals and unwelcome requests or persistent personal invitations to go out.

(c) Non-verbal forms of sexual harassment include unwelcome gestures, suggestive body language, indecent exposure, lRBNivious looks, repeated winks, and gestures with fingers. It also includes the unwelcome display of pornographic materials, sexually explicit pictures and objects, screen savers or posters as well as sexually explicit e-mails, notes or SMS messages.

IV. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

1. EMPLOYERS

It is the role and responsibility of every employer, regardless of the size of his/her company, to create and maintain a working environment which is free from sexual harassment. Employers should respond promptly to any accusation of sexual harassment, ensuring that alleged victims do not have fear of reprisals or feel that their grievances are being ignored or trivialised.

In order to effectively prevent sexual harassment at the workplace every employer should adopt, promote, implement and monitor a policy on sexual harassment within workplace regulations, collective agreement or other legal regulations of the company.

The policy should be jointly developed with the trade union to ensure its effective implementation.

V. RECOMMENDATIONS ON PROCEDURES RELEVANT TO SEXUAL HARASSMENT IN THE WORKPLACE

1. COMPANY POLICY ON SEXUAL HARASSMENT

A company policy on sexual harassment should generally be stand-alone. In the case of smaller companies, however, it might be appropriate to link it to the company's policy on equality and non-discrimination. It should be written in simple, direct language and should be easily understandable to all workplace participants, including illiterate workers. A policy should include the following key elements:

- ☑ Prohibition of sexual harassment in the workplace;
- ☑ A clear definition of sexual harassment;
- ☑ A clear and easy-to-understand complaints/grievance procedure;
- ☑ Disciplinary rules against the harasser and against anyone who makes a false accusation; and
- ☑ Protective and remedial measures for the victim.

Commitment against sexual harassment at the workplace

The policy statement against sexual harassment at the workplace should be articulated by top management to ensure acceptance and compliance by all workers including supervisors and managers. It should clearly indicate (a) the company's commitment to ensuring a workplace free from sexual harassment; (b) that sexual harassment will not be tolerated under any circumstances; (c) that swift disciplinary action will be taken against any male of female staff member found to be in breach of the policy; and (d) that supervisors and managers have a duty both to implement the policy and demonstrate leadership by example.

The definition

A detailed definition should be included to ensure that all staff – workers, supervisors and managers - understands what constitutes sexual harassment. The most important element to be emphasized is that sexual harassment is unwelcome behaviour of a sexual nature. A list (which could be non-exhaustive) of examples should be provided. It should also be made clear that any interaction which is consensual, welcome and reciprocated (except for those prohibited by the laws) is not sexual harassment.

Complaints/grievance procedures

The complaints procedure should be clearly explained using simple language. If necessary, it should be made available in suitable formats for those who are unable to read the language. The procedure should ensure that any worker wishing to make a complaint has no doubt about what to do and whom to approach. The procedure should be appropriate for the company's size and structure. If necessary, an existing procedure addressing other types of work-related grievances may be used or adapted for this purpose. It is recommended that both informal and formal grievance mechanisms be offered. Detailed information on these procedures is provided at Annex 1.

The penalties and compensation

The company policy on sexual harassment should clearly indicate the disciplinary action to be expected in the case of non-compliance. Depending on the severity of the case, consequences can range from an apology to the victim or disciplinary warning to counselling, transfer, demotion or dismissal; such disciplinary action should be included in the company's regulations. It should be clear that immediate disciplinary action will be taken against anyone who victimises or retaliates against a person who has complained of sexual harassment.

If a victim of sexual harassment has suffered damages, such as a demotion or denial of a promotion, as a consequence of the harassment, it is appropriate that this person be compensated appropriately. The victim should also be compensated for any monetary loss arising out of a denial of employment-related benefits which were rightfully due to him/her.

Non-staff members, such as clients or contractors should also be informed that if a complaint against them is rightfully upheld, it could result in termination of a contract, suspension of service or business cooperation.

Other measures

The company policy on sexual harassment should propose measures which will ensure maximum confidentiality for all parties concerned, both at the time of reporting and while the complaint is being investigated. It should be made clear that staff members will not be victimised or subject to sanctions for (a) making a complaint in good faith; (b) giving evidence in proceedings; or (c) giving notice of intention to do so. It should also be made clear that in the course of investigating a complaint the employer will make no assumptions about the guilt or innocence of the alleged harasser.

VI. RECOMMENDATIONS ON COMMUNICATING AND IMPLEMENTING THE POLICY ON SEXUAL HARASSMENT IN THE WORKPLACE

Implementation of the company regulations on sexual harassment should be carefully monitored by preparing annual reports on the number and type of complaints that were raised and the manner in which they were resolved.
This information should be immediately analysed and appropriate revisions made to the policy if necessary.

1. COMMUNICATING THE POLICY

The policy on sexual harassment and its specific contents should be effectively communicated to all staff members, including managers, supervisors, workers, customers, clients, contractors, and any other business contacts, including those who supply and receive goods and services. Special efforts should be made for workers in remote areas.

Effective means of communicating the policy include through newsletters, training manuals, training courses, leaflets, websites, e-mails and displaying anti-sexual harassment posters on notice boards in shared work areas. Verbal communication of the policy is particularly important in workplaces where staff may be illiterate.

USEFUL TIPS FOR EMPLOYERS

- ☑ The policy on sexual harassment should be officially launched at a full staff meeting.
- ☑ The policy should be endorsed by the chief executive officer or a senior management representative emphasizing that all staff are required to comply with it.
- ☑ The policy should be distributed to and signed by all staff, acknowledging that they have received and understood it.
- ☑ The policy should be placed on the company's website and intranet.
- ☑ The policy should be included in induction manuals for new staff.
- ☑ The policy should be displayed on notice boards.

USEFUL TIPS FOR EMPLOYERS

2. GOOD PRACTICES

REGULAR TRAINING

Regular training sessions on sexual harassment should be conducted for all staff members, including managers, supervisors and workers. The purpose of this training is to: (a) raise awareness of what constitutes sexual harassment; (b) provide details of the company's sexual harassment policy; and (c) provide updates on any changes which may have been made to it. Regular refresher training is recommended.

Managers and supervisors should also be specifically trained to distinguish between appropriate and inappropriate behaviour, in order to effectively carry out their role in ensuring that the workplace is free from sexual harassment.

Those identified in the policy as having responsibility for handling complaints should receive special in-depth training on how to prevent and address sexual harassment.

Depending on the type of training being conducted, and the number of staff members involved, sessions may vary from a few hours to an entire day.

CONFIDENTIALITY

Employers should take every measure to ensure that sexual harassment complaints are investigated and handled in a confidential manner without exposing the identities of the parties involved. Only the persons specifically appointed by the employer are entitled to handle such cases; the complainant, his/her representative, the alleged harasser, his/her representative, witnesses and interpreters (if required), are entitled to participate in the investigation process.

Employers should disclose any information requested in preparation for the disciplinary enquiry.

EFFECTIVE MANAGEMENT MODELLING All managers and supervisors should demonstrate a strong commitment to the sexual harassment policy by modelling appropriate behaviour at all times and this should be regularly looked at by employers through performance reviews.

GOOD WORKPLACE MODELLING

Employers should create and maintain a working environment which is free from sexual harassment. Effective ways of ensuring this include:

- The removal of offensive, pornography or sexually explicit materials from the workplace;
- Regular monitoring of the policy and procedures to deal with sexual harassment;
- Mixed (male/female) panels for job interviews; and
- Well-lit work areas equipped with an electronic monitoring system.

Formal complaints are usually managed by the human resources department or an individual specifically appointed by the employer. If the complaint is against this department or specific individual working in this department, an independent external person should manage it. Complaints should be investigated and dealt with promptly. In the case of formal investigations, allegations must be in writing and signed by the complainant(s). Trade unions or staff representatives should also be able to submit complaints on behalf of one or more workers. The alleged harasser should receive a copy of the allegations and be given an opportunity to respond before the investigation begins.

A thorough investigation should:

- Include interviews with complainants, their witnesses, alleged harassers and their witnesses. It is good practice that interviewees be accompanied by a trusted colleague or trade union representative.
- Examine all relevant documents, records and personnel files if necessary;
- Provide a written summary of the full investigation to the complainant and the alleged harasser;
- Both parties should be given the opportunity to provide comments on the content of this summary before the full report is finalized;

 If the report is drafted by an independent investigator, the full report should be submitted to the person and/or department responsible for handling sexual harassment complaints. This report should include who was interviewed, what questions were asked, the investigator's conclusions, and what possible remedies, sanctions or other action may be appropriate.

Support from outside the company may be used if the complainant is not satisfied with the outcome of internal processes, or has grounds to lack confidence in them.

Committees handling sexual harassment cases should include an equal representation of men and women to ensure that the perspectives of both women and men are taken into consideration. They also need to include representatives of both management and workers. Victims should be represented or accompanied by a representative of their choice to participate in the handling process.

The Company's responsibilities in preventing and addressing sexual harassment

Any employee or those working for the company who believes that he or she is a victim of sexual harassment must immediately report any incident to (NAME AND CONTACT DETAILS OF PERSON/DEPARTMENT).

(NAME OF COMPANY/ORGANIZATION/AGENCY) will not tolerate retaliation against any person who makes a complaint of sexual harassment. It will take the necessary steps to ensure that the matter is thoroughly investigated and promptly addressed. If the allegation is determined to be credible, (NAME OF COMPANY/ORGANIZATION/AGENCY) will take immediate and effective measures to end the unwelcome behaviour. (NAME OF COMPANY/ORGANIZATION/AGENCY) is committed to taking action if it learns of possible sexual harassment, even without a formal complaint.

(NAME OF PERSON OR DEPARTMENT) is the main contact point for questions or concerns about sexual harassment. (NAME OF PERSON OR DEPARTMENT) has responsibility for investigating or overseeing investigations of alleged sexual harassment. (NAME OF COMPANY/ORGANIZATION/AGENCY) is committed to ensuring that all investigations of sexual harassment are conducted in a prompt, thorough, and impartial manner.

Supervisors and other responsible officials who observe, are informed of, or reasonably suspect incidents of possible sexual harassment must immediately report such incidents to (NAME OF PERSON OR DEPARTMENT), (who/which) will either initiate or oversee a prompt investigation. Failure to report such incidents to (NAME OF PERSON OR DEPARTMENT) will be considered a violation of this policy and may result in disciplinary action. (NAME OF PERSON OR DEPARTMENT) will provide guidance as needed on investigating and handling the alleged harassment. Supervisors should take effective measures to ensure that no further apparent or alleged harassment occurs pending completion of an investigation.

(NAME OF COMPANY/ORGANIZATION/AGENCY) will seek to protect the identities of the alleged victim and harasser, as reasonably necessary (for example, to complete an investigation successfully). (NAME OF COMPANY/ORGANIZATION/AGENCY) will also take the necessary steps to protect from retaliation those employees who in good faith report incidents. It is a violation of this policy and of the law to retaliate against someone who has reported possible sexual harassment, and violators may be subject to discipline.

Cell Phone & Technology use while in office

Policy brief & purpose

Our employee cell phone policy outlines our guidelines for using cell phones at work.

We recognize that cell phones (and smartphones especially) have become an integral part of everyday life. They may be a great asset if used correctly (for productivity apps, calendars, business calls etc.)

But, cell phones may also cause problems when used imprudently or excessively.

Scope

This policy applies to all our employees.

Policy elements

Despite their benefits, personal cell phones may cause problems in the workplace. Employees who use their cell phones excessively may:

- Get distracted from their work.
- Disturb colleagues by speaking on their phones.
- Cause security issues from inappropriate use of company-issued equipment or misuse of our company's internet connection.
- Cause accidents when they illegally use their phones inside company vehicles or near areas where using phones is prohibited.

Our company expects employees to use their cellphones prudently during working hours.

We advise our employees to:

- Use company-issued phones for business purposes only and preserve them in perfect condition.
- Surf the internet, text and talk on the phone only for a few minutes per day.
- Turn off or silence their phones when asked.

We won't allow employees to:

- Play games on the cell phone during working hours.
- Use their phones for any reason while driving a company vehicle.
- Use their phones in areas where cell use is explicitly prohibited (e.g. laboratories.)
- Speak on their phones within earshot of colleagues' working space during working hours.
- Download or upload inappropriate, illegal or obscene material on a company cell phone using a corporate internet connection.

How to properly use cell phones in the workplace

Employees can benefit from using cell phones. They're allowed to use their phones:

- To make business calls.
- To use productivity apps.
- To check important messages.
- To make brief personal calls away from the working space of colleagues.

Employees can use their phones during breaks or at lunch hour and while on a stationary vehicle.

Disciplinary Consequences

Our company retains the right to monitor employees for excessive or inappropriate use of their cell phones. If an employee's phone usage causes a decline in productivity or interferes with our operations, we'll ban that employee from using their cell phones.

Employees may face severe disciplinary action up to and including termination, in cases when they:

- Cause a security breach.
- Violate our confidentiality policy.
- Cause an accident by recklessly using their phones.

Substance Use

Substance Abuse Policy Template:

Introduction.

Substance abuse impairs the rational thinking and actions of employees, inflicting additional responsibility on coworkers, and may lead to workplace accidents, poor job performance, and unsatisfactory customer service. Therefore, RBN has established this substance abuse policy to protect both its employees and customers, and to ensure a safe and healthy work environment for all.

Purpose.

The purpose of this substance abuse policy is to (a) prohibit the use, distribution, and/or manufacturing of illegal drugs and alcohol on company premises; (b) establish protocols and guidelines that limit the use of legal substances; (c) to meet all legal and/or state requirements regarding substance abuse in the workplace; and (d) to outline the disciplinary steps that will be taken if an employee tests positive for substance abuse.

Scope.

All applicants and employees under contract with RBN, including paid internships, volunteers, and part-time, seasonal, and permanent employees, are prohibited from using, storing, manufacturing, and distributing illegal and illicit drugs and/or alcohol while on company premises.

Workplace Rules.

While on duty at RBN, employees are prohibited from:

1. Selling, possessing, using, manufacturing, and/or distributing proscribed drugs, including inhalants, illegal drugs, and over-the-counter drugs.
2. Selling, possessing, using, manufacturing, and/or distributing alcoholic beverages.
3. Driving RBN vehicles or personal vehicles (if applicable) while under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol.
4. Using and/or distributing prescription drugs that cause drowsiness or impaired performance while working or being on RBN premises.

Required Testing:

Pre-employment.

Applicants who are being considered for a job position at RBN will be required to pass a drug test before signing an official contract. If an applicant declines a drug test or fails to fully cooperate, he/she will immediately be disqualified.

Reasonable Suspicion.

An employee will be subject to a drug test or formal investigation if at least [number of employees] employees, including a team leader, supervisor, or manager, has witnessed irregular behavior, workplace use of prohibited substances, or physical impairment due to substance abuse. Additionally, RBN requires the complaintive(s) to complete a Reasonable Suspicion Checklist to document their observations.

Reasonable Suspicion Checklist:

- Alcohol or drug-related odors. ⍰
- Impaired speech. ⍰
- Impaired physical movements.⍰
- Dilated or watery eyes.⍰
- Irregular actions. ⍰
- Explosive or irregular emotions. ⍰

Before formally approaching the employee in question, the human resources (HR) department should be contacted for assistance on how to respond. If there is sufficient proof of substance abuse, management, HR, and the employee in question will convene for a formal meeting. The employee in question also reserves the right to ask for a witness or union representative to join the discussion.

Post-Accident.

If there is a probable belief that an employee was under the influence during a work-related accident or while operating a RBN vehicle, machine, and/or valuable device, the employee(s) in question will be required to undergo a drug test. In this scenario, the employee(s) in question would have to undergo a drug test within [number of hours] hours after the incident occurred.

Disciplinary Action:

If an employee does not submit to an authorized drug test or participates in the usage, distribution, and/or manufacturing of illegal drugs while on [company name's] premises, he/she will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

Team leaders, supervisors, and managers are required to immediately report employees that are in violation of this policy. If an employee declines to participate in a drug test but is believed to be under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol, the employee in question will not be allowed to enter the workplace or interact with customers.

RBN does reserve the right to offer an employee that tests positive for drugs and/or alcohol the opportunity to return to work, depending on the case circumstances and state requirements. In this scenario, the employee in question will be required to undergo regular drug testing for the minimum of [number of months/years. If the employee in question tests positive during the probation period or refuses to participate in a drug test, he/she will be subject to further disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

Dress Code

Introduction

The RBN dress code policy is designed to help us all provide a consistent professional appearance to our customers and colleagues. Our appearance reflects on ourselves and the company. The goal is to be sure that we maintain a positive appearance and not to offend customers, clients, or colleagues.

Who does this policy apply to?

The RBN dress code policy applies to [which positions this applies to].

RBN Dress Code Policy:

- Employees are expected to dress in [casual, business casual, smart casual, business] attire unless the day's tasks require otherwise.
- Employees must always present a clean, professional appearance. Everyone is expected to be well-groomed and wear clean clothing, free of holes, tears, or other signs of wear.
- Clothing with offensive or inappropriate designs or stamps are not allowed.
- Clothing should not be too revealing.
- Clothing and grooming styles dictated by religion or ethnicity are exempt.

Dress Code Violations

Managers or supervisor are expected to inform employees when they are violating the dress code. Employees in violation are expected to immediately correct the issue. This may include having to leave work to change clothes.

Repeated violations or violations that have major repercussions may result in disciplinary action being taken up to and including termination.

Disciplinary Actions that may be taken

Policy Overview

RBN's discipline policy explains the steps we will take to address employee failure to perform or misconduct.
This policy applies to all RBN's employees.

At-Will Employment

Although we may try to follow our discipline policy as outlined below, employees at RBN work at-will, and can be terminated at any time, for any reason.

Progressive Discipline Steps

Our disciplinary process can move The HR or Admin through the following 5 steps:

1. Verbal warning
2. Formal written warning
3. Formal disciplinary meeting
4. Suspension or loss of privileges
5. Termination

Managers or supervisors or senior coordinators will document each step in this process using official forms. All forms must be filed with HR OR ADMIN or Admin. Managers or supervisors or senior coordinators must meet with HR OR ADMIN or Admin before making decisions regarding steps 4 and 5.

Employees must always be informed of any disciplinary action, of what stage they are in, the consequences of further violations, and corrective actions they can take.

Steps may be repeated at the discretion of the manager or supervisor or senior co-ordinator.

Understanding the 5 Steps

Step 1: Employees should receive verbal warnings in private. The exact nature of what took place and why it is in violation of policy, or how it falls short of performance expectations, should be explained, along with proper corrective actions. HR OR ADMIN or Admin should be notified that the warning was given.

Step 2: The manager or supervisor or senior co-ordinator should use a disciplinary action form to describe the incident and corrective actions. The employee should read the form and sign that they received it.

Step 3: The employee, manager/supervisor, and an HR OR ADMIN representative meet to discuss the problem. HR OR ADMIN investigates the problem. The employee is informed that after this point punitive action may take place, up to, and including termination.

Step 4: The employee may receive penalties, such as a loss of certain privileges, suspension from some or all duties, a demotion or other appropriate penalties.

Step 5: Employees who do not correct their behavior at this point may be terminated. The final decision to terminate will be approved by an HR OR ADMIN representative after an investigation to ensure fairness.

The RBN progressive discipline plan may begin at any step, depending on the severity of the offense. For example, employee tardiness will begin at step 1, mistakes that cause major disruptions at work may begin at step 3. Fraud or other illegal or dangerous behavior may go directly to step 5.

The RBN progressive discipline policy is meant to provide guidelines.

Right to appeal

Employees who believe they were not treated properly may appeal and disciplinary decisions with HR OR ADMIN.

Privacy Policy

Privacy Policy

Effective Date: October 2019

RBN values your privacy. In this Privacy Policy ("Policy"), we describe how we collect, use, and disclose information, including Personal Information that we obtain about visitors to our website www.alifconsultant.co.uk ("Website") and the services available through our Website ("Services").

"Personal Information" means any unique information or set of information that could be used to identify or contact an individual, such as the individual's name, title, mailing address, email address, phone number, employer/profession, login information, password, payment card information or other specific types of personal information.

1. Types of Information and Collection Methods

Information Submitted by You

You may be asked to provide Personal Information anytime you are in contact with RBN. RBN may collect Personal Information about you (and through third parties or other sources where permitted by law) when you interact with us, such as creating or registering for an account, using our products and services, downloading our software, requesting information, requesting notifications for service bulletin or products and services updates, participating in surveys, submitting a job application or when you otherwise actively send us data and Personal Information. In each such instance, you will know what data we collected because you voluntarily submitted it. You are not required to provide any Personal Information that we have requested, but if you chose not to do so, you may not be able to access certain content on our Website or products and services offered or we will not be able to respond to any inquiries you may have or process your orders.

You may also submit technical information to RBN such as designs, ideas or data, that you transmit to or post on any of our Website for purposes not limited to contest participation. Such submission is considered and treated by RBN as nonconfidential and nonproprietary. By providing these submissions, you grant RBN a nonexclusive, royalty-free, perpetual, irrevocable, sublicensable right to disseminate, display, use, modify, copy, adapt, and translate the submission for any purpose whatsoever, whether commercial or noncommercial, throughout the world in any media. You also grant us the right to use the name you submit in connection with your submission, if we choose. You represent and warrant in making these submissions that you own or control all rights to these submissions, and that use of your submissions will not cause injury to any person or entity including Microsemi. You will indemnify us for all claims resulting from your submissions.

If you choose to provide RBN with a third party's personal information (such as name, email, and phone number), you represent and warrant that you have the third party's permission to do so. Examples include forwarding reference or marketing material to a friend or sending job referrals.

Information Collected Through Third-Party Sources

We may also collect information about you through our trusted third-party sources to assist us in providing product and service offerings to you.

Information Automatically Collected

Like many other websites, RBN uses automatic data collection tools, such as cookies, embedded web links, web beacons, gifs and other similar technologies. These tools automatically collect certain standard information that your browser sends to our Website when you visit our Website or use our Services, such as your domain name, your browser type, operating system, web pages you view, links you click, your IP address, the length of time you visit our Website or use our Services, the referring URL or the webpage that led you to our Website. Please see the section "Cookies and Similar Technologies" below for more information.

Combination
We and the third parties we engaged to provide services on our behalf may combine the information we collect from you over time and across our Website with Personal Information that you actively submit, to the extent permitted by applicable law.

2. How We May Use Your Information

We may use your information for purposes of operating our business and other legitimate purposes permitted by applicable law. We may use your personal information in the following ways:

- To communicate with you about our products or services, respond to your inquiries, fulfill and process your request for our products and services, including helping you to complete transactions, process payments, and other customer service purposes.
- To enable you to use certain features of our product and services
- To administer the careers portion of the Website and process your application.
- To better understand how visitors use our Website and products and services, both on an aggregated and individualized basis, in order to improve our Website and products and services and for other research and analytical purposes.
- To send communications to you, either from RBN directly or from our partners, including for marketing, newsletters, promotions, customer satisfaction surveys purposes and other communications related to our business, including information about our solutions we think may interest you. You can edit your communication preferences for receiving marketing emails as further explained below.

3. How We Share Your Information

We are not in the business of selling or sharing your Personal Information with third parties for marketing purposes unless you have granted us permission to do so. We may share and use your Personal Information as described below:

- With our affiliates and subsidiaries worldwide.
- With third-party vendors, service providers, contractors or agents as required to perform specific purposes on our behalf. Examples are not limited to delivering packages, processing credit card payments, checking for export compliance, and providing customer service. They have access to customer information to perform their jobs, but may not use it for other purposes.
- To geographically or spectrally relevant resellers and/or distributors, particularly if you or your company have purchased through a third party before. These companies and persons often provide service to Microsemi's customers. They have access to customer information to perform their jobs, which is not limited to marketing RBN products, but may not use it for other purposes.

- To comply with the law, a judicial proceeding, court order or a subpoena other legal processes, such as requests from public and governmental authorities or law enforcement, or to exercise our legal rights or defend against legal claims.
- Where we believe it is necessary to investigate, prevent, or act regarding illegal activities, suspected fraud, brand protection, situations involving potential threats to the safety of any person, violations of our Terms of Use or this Policy, or as otherwise required by law.
- In connection with a prospective or actual sale, merger, transfer or other reorganization of all or parts of our business.

If you do not wish us to share your information as described below, you may choose not to supply any Personal Information to us when entering information into your account profile on our Website or by not placing orders for our products and services.

We reserve the right to fully use and share information on an aggregated basis, which is not personally identifiable about the user, with third parties for marketing, advertising, research or similar purposes.

4. We May Use Cookies and Similar Technologies to Collect Information

We and our third-party service providers use cookies and other common web tracking mechanisms to track information about your use of our Website and Services. We may use this information, which is collected and remains in aggregate form, to understand how visitors use our Website so that we can better tailor our interactions with you when you browse our Website and to improve our Website.

Cookie

A cookie is a small data file that our website stores on your computer hard drive for record-keeping purposes. We use cookies for website administration, such as maintaining your log-in or your preferences, to keep track of your navigation through our Website and to observe your navigation across other sites in order to better match your interests to Microsemi's products and services. Most web browsers automatically accepts cookies. If you prefer not to receive cookies, you can set your browser to allow you to refuse the setting of all or some cookies. You can also refuse all cookies by turning them off in your browser. Although you may still use our Website without the cookie, some areas or features of our Website or Services may not function for you.

Third-Party Analytics

We also use automated devices and applications, such as Google Analytics to collect information in an anonymous form about how visitors use our Website. For information on Google's privacy policy, please visit http://www.google.com. We also may use other analytic means to evaluate the use of our Website and Services and for analysis and statistical purposes. We use these tools to help us improve our Services, performance and user experiences. These third-parties may use cookies and other tracking technologies to perform their services.

Do Not Track

Some web browsers may let you enable a "do not track" feature that sends signals to the websites you visit, indicating that you do not want your online activities tracked. This is different than blocking or deleting cookies, as browsers with a "do not track" feature enabled may still accept cookies. There is currently no industry standard for how companies should respond to "do not track" signals, although one may develop in the future. We do not respond to "do not track" requests or signals at this time. If we do so in the future, we will describe how in this Policy.

5. How You Can Access and Modify Your Personal Information

Where permitted by law, RBN will take reasonable steps to permit you to access and modify Personal Information that you have submitted by logging into your account and updating your profile but we reserve the right to use Personal Information obtained or provided previously to verify your identity or take other actions that we believe are appropriate. You can also exercise your rights of access and request corrections, suppression or deactivation of your Personal Information under applicable data protection laws by contacting us directly at the email address provided below. We make good faith efforts to honor reasonable requests to access, delete, update, suppress, or correct your data. We will respond to your request within 30 days. If we are unable to honor your request, we will provide you with an explanation. Please note that copies of information that you have updated, modified or deleted may remain viewable in cached and archived pages of the Website for a period of time.

6. How You Can Manage Your Communications Preferences

We may send periodic promotional or informational emails to you about our products, services or our Website. You can manage your communication preference by following the instructions included in each promotional email from us to either continue to subscribe to or unsubscribe from that particular mailing or by clicking on the "Stay Informed" on the bottom of our Website page and follow instructions. If you chose to unsubscribe to promotional or informational emails on a particular matter, we may still send you emails about your account, on any services you have requested or received from us or other required communications in connection with our products and services. You can also indicate your preferences for communication notifications, such as product changes or updated literature, or offers are only available electronically in your account setting on our Website. Please note that even if you choose not to receive electronic communications from us, our terms and conditions and policies, such as Website Terms of Use, Privacy Policy, and Terms and Condition will still govern your use of our Website any products you purchase or samples you request.

7. How We Secure Your Information

We intend to protect the personal information entrusted to us and treat it securely in accordance with this Privacy Statement. We implement physical, administrative and technical safeguards to protect your Personal Information from misuse, and unauthorized access, disclosure, alteration and destruction. However, please be aware that despite our efforts, the internet cannot be guaranteed to be 100% secure or error-free and we cannot ensure or warrant the security of any Personal Information you provide to us. It is your responsibility to protect against unauthorized access to your user ID, password, phone number, and computer by, among other things, signing off after using a shared computer, choosing a robust password that nobody else knows or can easily guess, and keeping your user ID and password private. You must notify RBN immediately at if you suspect that your password or user ID has been compromised. You are solely responsible for any unauthorized use of the Website conducted via your password and user ID. We are not responsible for any lost, stolen, or compromised passwords or for any activity on your account via unauthorized password activity.

8. Your Consent to Transfer and Storing of Data

We keep data in California and also have servers, employees, and contractors around the Bangladesh and around the world in various locations. As RBN is a Bangladeshi organization, we may transfer your Personal Information to RBN in the United States or to any RBN subsidiaries and affiliates worldwide or to third parties and business partners that located in various countries around the world. By using our Website or providing any Personal Information to us, you fully understand and consent to the transfer, processing, and storage of such information outside of your country of residence where data protection standards may be different. We will retain and use your Personal Information as needed to fulfill the purpose for which it was collected. We will retain and use Personal Information as necessary to comply with our business requirements, legal obligations, resolve disputes or enforce our agreements. Subject to any applicable business, legal, or regulatory requirements, we delete or erase Personal Information when it is no longer required to enforce our rights or meet our obligations.

9. Children's Privacy

Our Website and Services are intended for adults. We do not intentionally or knowingly accept, collect, use or disclose personal information from anyone under the age of 13 and we request that individuals under the age of 13 not submit any personal information on the Website.

10. Link to Third-Party Sites

Our Website and Services may contain links to third party websites or automatically produce search results that refer or link to other party websites. RBN is providing these links to you only as a convenience and the inclusion of any of these links does not constitute any endorsement by Microsemi. Links to other websites are not under the control of RBN and RBN is not responsible for the content or the accuracy or reliability of any such contents and materials made on any linked site or any link contained in a linked site, or any changes or updates to such sites. Any access to and use of such linked sites is not governed by this Policy, but instead is governed by the privacy policies of those third-party websites. Equal Opportunity

Equal Opportunity

Policy

It is the policy of RBN to provide employment opportunities without regard to race, color, religion, national origin, age, disability, veteran or military status, pregnancy status, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, or genetic information.

The Company seeks to maintain a highly productive organization of men and women who represent differences in viewpoints, cultures, races and gender, and embraces good ideas produced by that diversity. This will be accomplished through selection and training of qualified people and will provide them with compensation, benefits, and opportunities for advancement without discrimination. This policy is subject to the requirements of local laws and regulations.

In order to provide equal employment and advancement opportunities to all individuals, employment decisions at RBN will be based on merit, qualifications, and abilities. RBN does not discriminate in employment opportunities or practices on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, gender identity, sexual orientation, national origin, age, veteran or military status, marital status, pregnancy status, disability, genetic information, or any other characteristic protected by applicable law. RBN will not tolerate acts of discrimination (which includes harassment).

No hardship, loss of benefits, nor penalty may be imposed on an employee as punishment for filing a good faith complaint of discrimination or responding to a complaint of discrimination, appearing as a witness in the investigation of a complaint, service as an investigator or otherwise cooperating in a workplace investigation. Retaliation or attempted retaliation is a violation of this Policy and anyone who engages in retaliatory behavior may be subject to discipline as set forth below.

RBN does not and will not employ child labor or forced labor. In addition, RBN will not knowingly engage a supplier or distributor, or enter into a joint venture with an organization, that employs or subcontracts child labor or forced labor. RBN defines "child labor" as work or service extracted from anyone under the age of sixteen, and defines "forced labor" as any work or service not voluntarily performed and extracted from an individual under threat of force.

Procedure

If you have a concern that you may have violated this policy, or you have a good faith suspicion that another OC employee is in violation of this policy, you should report this to your manager, leader, or another trusted manager, your Human Resources representative, a member of Legal Operations, or a member of the Business Conduct Council who shall refer the report for investigation and resolution.

If you do not feel comfortable reporting your concern to these individuals, you may call the Business Conduct Helpline in Bangladesh at 01407-078080 , 01407-078087 , (country-specific telephone numbers can be found in the Code of Conduct or the company intranet), or via the web at http://www.alifconsultant.co.uk

NOTE: Any employee who fails to comply with this policy may be subject to discipline, up to and including termination.
